

IN SAD REMEMBRANCE OF

268 MEN & BOYS WHO WERE KILLED IN THE PRINCE OF WALES PIT
ABERCARN, BY AN EXPLOSION, WED. SEP. 11th 1878.

They left their cheerful homes that morn,
No thought of danger crossed their way.

But sad alas it was their doom,
To lose their lives by fire that day.

AN ODE

To the RIGHT HONOURABLE LORD TREDEGAR, on the occasion of his visit to Risca, as President of the Eisteddfod, October 5th, 1896.

HAIL, noble lord! long live thine honoured name
In fadeless letters on the scroll of fame;
Thy myriad deeds of kindness—all so fair—
Are carved on hearts o'erwhelmed with sad despair.
The needy ones and the deserving poor,
Who watch the wolf of hunger at their door;
The orphan and the widow in distress.
Whose mute appeals for some kind soul to bless,—
These never cry in vain; thy hand and heart
Delight sweet loving-kindness to impart;
The sad thou cheerest, and the troubled mind,
Thou art a generous friend to all mankind!
In every heart thou art enthroned as king,
Thy countless virtues would we laud and sing;
As flowers exhale their fragrance on the air,—
Such is thy life—so hallowed, sweet, and fair.
Hail, "Ifor Hael!" renowned by noble birth—
One of the fairest, kindest sons of earth;
The ever-generous friend of muse and song;
These shall for ages thy fair fame prolong:
While old "Twyn Barlwm" towers above the hills,
And "Ebbw's" music this fair valley fills;
While the Eisteddfod and the Kymric race—
The glories of thy name shall find a place.
